Native Religion under Roman Domination: Deities, springs and mountains in the north-west of the Iberian Peninsula (British Archaeological Reports British Series) Elizabeth Richert

This analysis of the extent to which Roman domination impacted on and changed the religion of north-western Hispania is based upon an analysis of many inscriptions, which reveal the names of indigenous and classical deities, including those with indigenous epithets. Elizabeth A Richert argues that this evidence indicates that local residents worshipped 'a bewildering array' of deities, many of which were linked to local people and sacred places and, therefore, were very different from the Roman pantheon of gods. The local mountains and rock formations would have had more influence on local religion than Roman occupiers; locals selected which of the new Roman deities fitted in most suitably with their own religious needs. Much of the book comprises a catalogue of inscriptions.
