Guangxi Museum Wu Weifeng

The Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region is one of the most complex and culturally fascinating areas of China. The Guangxi Museum illustrates all aspects of this complex region reflecting both classical Chinese culture as well as that of the Zhuang, the largest minority people in the region. There are eleven other minority peoples. The museum was opened in 1978, a modern structure with southern architectural characteristics. It also has a beautiful garden with lakes and buildings in local styles. Exhibits range from 'Liujiang Man' - the earliest representative of modern man found to date anywhere in China or Southeast Asia - to spectacular displays of Guangxi bronze culture; in particular bells but also axes, spears, ladles and other objects. The customs, costumes, weaving and dying technologies, embroidery and local festivals of the Zhuang and the eleven national minorities are also well represented, particularly in the gardens which feature minority people s building such as the wooden railing buildings of the Zahuang, the bamboo structures of the Yao, the hanging buildings of the Miao the homes of Maonan, and the drum towers and the wind and rain bridges of the Dong.
